The Gauntlet II has a few air leaks that we have not fixed yet. We have new cylinders and rods on quite a few of the heads, but we just hadn't gotten around to all of them yet. The machine was serviced by a technician its entire life and was last serviced by a tech in February of 2015. It is an older machine (1999) and does show some signs of wear, but it is in pretty good shape and runs like a champ. We ran 700-900 pcs/hour on it consistently.

The Diamondback doesn't have any air leaks and is really in excellent shape. This machine would run 500-600 pcs/hour with no problem whatsoever.

We have parts that will come with each machine, various cylinders, rods, cables, pedals, etc.
